Connectivity of territories in Russian Federation through creation of intelligent transport systems

Keywords: Regulatory act; legislation of constituent entity; intelligent transport system; transport infrastructure; navigation and information system

Although transportation remains one of the essential parts of economic and social infrastructure there is still not enough clarity in the understanding of legal relations arising from the operation of intelligent transportation systems. Such systems being installed in different regions create the framework of territorial connectivity within single economic zone. The authors analyze the regulatory acts passed to develop intelligent transport systems in some of the Russian Federation constituent entities.

Procedural rules and institutes regulating administrative proceedings in system of procedural law

Keywords: Administrative proceedings; Russian Federation Code of Administrative Procedure; branch of law; sub-branch; association of civil procedure law institutions

The author believes there are certain reservations as per adoption of the Russian Federation Code of Administrative Procedure. It may become an unwelcome legal precedent as it may lead to the adoption of new codes of procedure, for instance, Code of special procedure. The 'masterminds' of such code may use the Code of the Administrative Procedure as a justification of their initiative. What are the implications of such scenario?
